About us

At Amberjack we've long been setting the standards in future talent and intake-based volume recruitment. Our advanced systems and intelligent solutions are designed to deliver the ultimate recruitment experience. From intelligent attraction to recruitment process outsourcing and bespoke assessment and selection tools, we work as an extension to our client's teams. We are the quality behind the quantity. We do what's right for our clients and their candidates. We don't know any other way.

The role

Our technology team work with a diverse range of clients from Unilever, Mars and PwC, to GSK and Morrison's, creating bespoke volume recruitment tools and processes that will deliver results.

As a key member of the Senior Management Team, you will be responsible for the full life-cycle of the software products that support the delivery of our customer facing technology including: analysis, design, development, testing, implementation, support and maintenance of commercial systems. You will be our champion of technology innovation providing sound technical leadership, product and solution direction, and creating a culture of innovation and exploration. You may currently hold a similar role or perhaps have developed your experience in a large team and are now looking to put your stamp on a new opportunity. You will:

- Provide direction for the roadmap, evolution and continuous improvement of Amberjack's existing technical products
- Identify/assess new and key technical trends, informing and shaping technical strategy and the development of new innovation
- Be responsible for operational and strategic planning including defining and communicating project milestones, service level agreements, and resource allocation
- To be the external 'face' of technology expertise for Amberjack
- Procure, negotiate, manage and monitor contracts for associated technology services
- Create, implement and maintain a continuous improvement plan for software development
- Ensure that the skills of the technical function are consistent with current standards/approaches and business needs

Who we're looking for

- Solutions orientated with a pedigree in delivering technical sales, delivery and operations within the technology solutions arena
- A proven background in software development
- Experience with systems design and development from business requirements analysis through to day-to-day management
- Highly credible with personal impact and proven experience of managing and/or directing a technical operation within a fast-paced business to business service sector environment
- Strong business, financial and commercial acumen gained in a client facing role, ideally with a software solutions provider
- Proven experience in strategic thinking, application planning and development, project management, and policy development

Why work for us?

In return we offer a competitive salary and benefits package, a collaborative, open and friendly working environment, and great opportunities for personal and professional development.
